What Doth the Lord Require of Thee?

This question, “What Doth the Lord Require of Thee?” comes directly from Micah 6:8, which reminds us: “He hath shewed thee, O man, what is good; and what doth the LORD require of thee, but to do justly, and to love mercy, and to walk humbly with thy God.”

The verse highlights that God’s desire is not for empty rituals or outward displays of religion, but for a heart and life transformed to reflect His righteousness and character.

When we look at the context in the Book of Micah chapter 6, we see that God is bringing a kind of charge against the people of Israel they had turned away from His ways.

The people respond by asking what they should bring before the Lord to please Him.

They mention burnt offerings, thousands of rams, rivers of oil, and even ask if they should give their firstborn for their transgression. Their thinking shows that they believed God could be satisfied merely through sacrifices and external acts of worship. However, the message through the prophet Micah is that God had already shown them what is good. The problem was not that they lacked knowledge of God’s will, but that they were failing to live according to it.

The first thing God requires is to do justly. Justice means doing what is right and fair in our dealings with others. God wants His people to reflect His righteousness in daily life.

The second requirement is to love mercy. Mercy involves kindness, compassion, patience, and forgiveness. It is not simply about showing mercy when we are forced to, but about loving it and making it a natural part of our character. God Himself is merciful and long-suffering, and He desires His people to show the same spirit toward others.

The third requirement is to walk humbly with God. Humility is essential in our relationship with God because it reminds us that we depend entirely on Him.

To walk with God means living our lives with constant awareness of His presence and guidance.

These three principles justice, mercy, and humility together describe the kind of life God desires
